

BIO
Amgad Farouk Megally

My name is Amgad Farouk Megally. I was born in Egypt, grew up in a Christian family. My father was an engineer, and he was a leader in our local church until he and my mother moved to the USA. They taught me most of the basic Christian and Biblical principles when I was a child. I have three brothers.

I came to know the Lord as my Savior at the age of thirteen at a youth camp in Mansoura city (My home city). I served the Lord in the Coptic Orthodox Church . The priest was a true man of God, and he encouraged me to serve the Lord among the youth meetings. We developed a Youth Ministry that met the needs of the church and those in the community who needed Christ.

At the same time I was attending the Presbyterian Church in Mansoura with my family. After about five years, I left the Coptic Church because of the conflict between Coptic doctrine and Evangelical doctrine which I felt much more comfort with.

While I was working in a poultry company, I felt the calling to serve God in a full-time ministry. I decided to attend The Evangelical Theological Seminary in Cairo (ETSC) as a full-time student in 2004. Since then I have sought the Lord's will for my life in all I do.

After graduation, I got married to a true Christian wife and we have two children, Andrew 10, and Anna 5 years old. I came to the USA to Virginia to be with my family. In May 2010, Heartland Presbytery invited me to come to Kansas to serve as a part-time pastor with the new Arabic Fellowship at Grace Covenant Church; I received my ordination in March 28, 2015 by a delegated committee from the Synod of the Nile (The Egyptian Synod).

I had one year full-time ministry with my congregation in 2016 which was a good time for personal spiritual growth and much more focusing on my ministry.

My vision is:

1. I am looking for being a full time minister to have the chance to develop and invest my skills in ministry field. And so I would be able to serve and extend my ministry among Arabs and American churches by using my gifts and talents to further the gospel of Christ.
2. To help churches become quality places, and to serve alongside men of God who are servants of grace for the Lord. I hope to continue as a servant of God to those in my church and community.
